

Velar

DESIGN WITH ANDREAS ENGESVIK

Velar is an understated sofa with a relaxed low-to-the-ground position and generous 2.5-seater proportions with ample space for two people or more. Its straight-forward design combines a minimalist steel tube frame with slim legs, and a single continuous cushion that curves with a high back to comfortably support the sitter's neck and head.

Without the armrests commonly included in traditional sofa design, Velar benefits from an open-ended arrangement that facilitates free movement and social harmony between the sofa and its environment. The Velar sofa has a broad appeal across age groups and an informal appearance that younger generations and children naturally enjoy. Its distinctive look and feel is similarly suited to public and private settings, with a silhouette that's beautiful from all angles. This is particularly striking when Velar is positioned in the middle of a room where it's elegant metal frame can make an impression. It also squares seamlessly against walls in compact spaces.
